

Andrew R. Schrock
@aschrock

My students often ask me what skills will help them in a job setting.

Sometimes I tell them "get really good at spreadsheets."

They think I am joking. I am 100% not joking.

11:30 AM · Oct 9, 2019 · TweetDeck

2.9K Retweets 17.9K Likes

Andrew R. Schrock @aschrock · Oct 9
Replying to @aschrock

Any industry. Any position. Being a spreadsheet god is transferable knowledge.

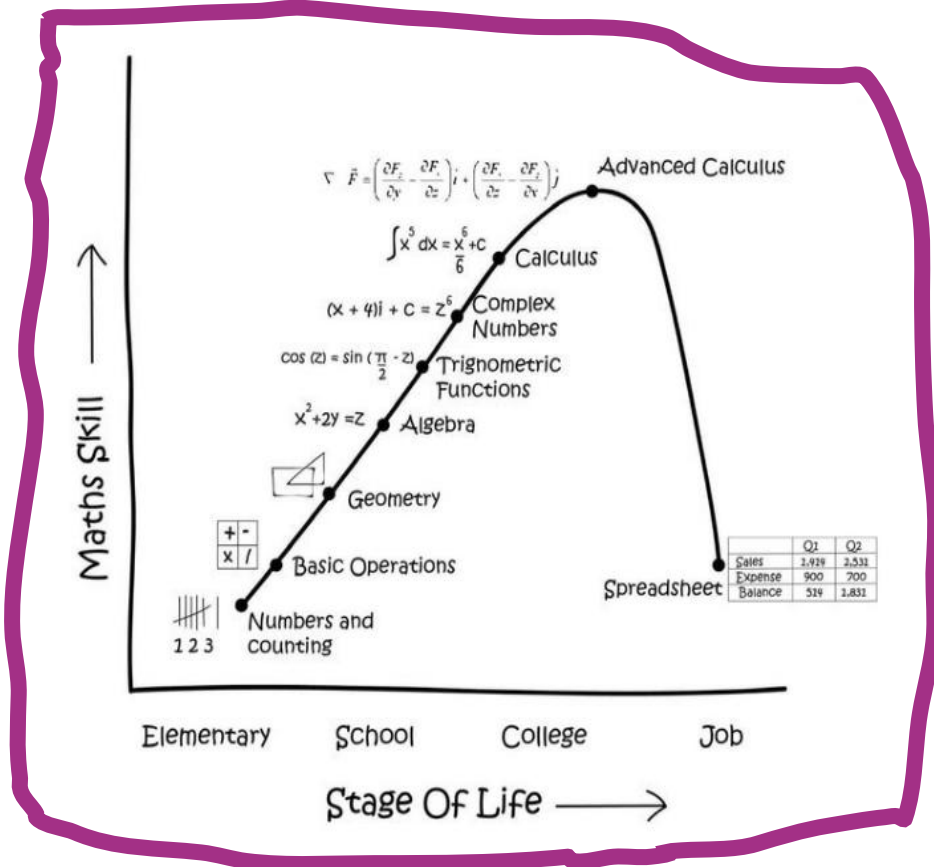

26

113

1.7K

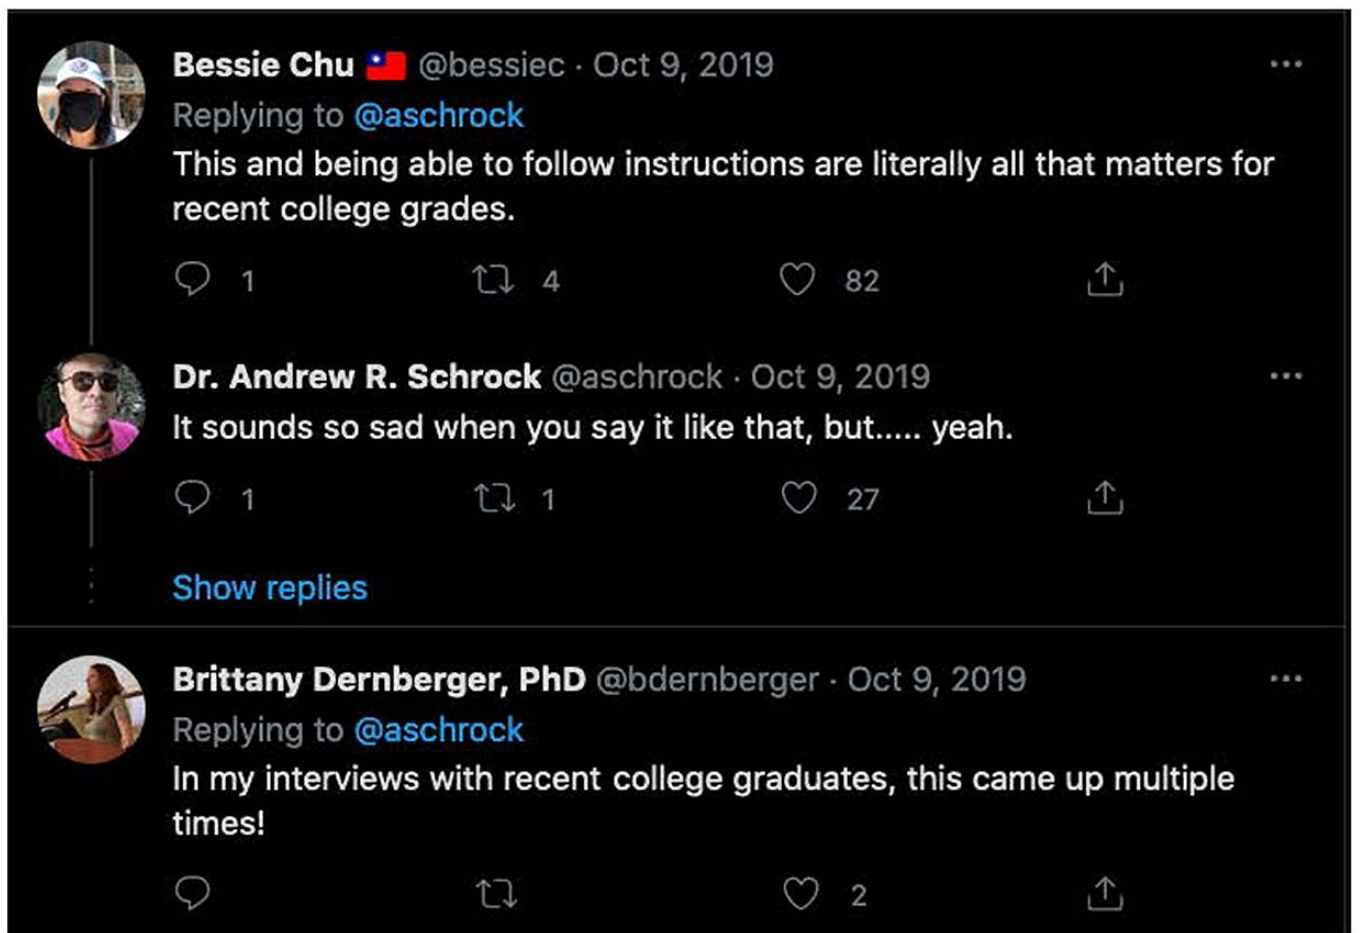

Matthias Waldhauer @Dresdenboy · 15h
Replying to @aschrock and @codinghorror

Matthias Waldhauer @Dresdenboy · 7h

Since this is blowing up: I don't know the original source, just got it from an article and used it as WhatsApp pic for a group. But I can give you this search link: google.com/search?q=math+...

Screenshot of above Twitter thread excerpt says the following:

Bessie Chu @bessiec Oct 9 2019
Replying to @aschrock

This [meaning getting good at spreadsheets] and being able to follow instructions are literally all that matters for recent college grads (to get jobs).

Dr. Andrew W. Schrock @aschrock - Oct 9, 2019

It sounds so sad when you say it like that, but yea

Brittany Dernberger, PhD @bdernberger - Oct 9, 2019
Replying to @aschrock

In my interviews with recent college graduates, this [meaning getting good at spreadsheets] came up multiple times! [meaning, recent college graduates confirmed that getting good at spreadsheets has helped them in their post-college job settings]